Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Peter is starting his internship. What does he need to do?

Learning Outcome

Accurately explain information about interests, hobbies, and preferences in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- When do you write notes?
- Are you good at taking notes?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs and work.
- I can identify main ideas in a small text.
- I can write point form notes.

Let's Explore!

Listen to the conversation between Peter and his new boss, Bill. Do you think Peter is going to enjoy his new job?

* The person in charge of a business or organization.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Bill: This is our conference room. Everyone, this is Peter Smith, our new intern.
Peter: Hello.
Bill: Peter, we need to complete the items on the training workshop list. Let's get started.
Peter: Let me grab my pen and notebook. Here they are.
Bill: You already have all of the company's login details and passwords. Look after them.
Peter: Yes, sir.
Bill: The work day starts at 9:00 a.m. and finishes at 5:00. You have one hour for lunch.
Peter: Do we work after 5:00 p.m. sometimes?
Bill: Maybe a couple times a month. The mail arrives at 9:15 a.m. every morning and needs to be sorted. Sarah can help you get started with that. Paul will be your supervisor. He is swamped with work. I know you are going to be busy ...
Paul: Yes ... You will be ... I like my coffee with milk and sugar, thanks!
Peter: Where is my office?
Bill: Interns don't have offices. You share a cubicle with Amanda.
Peter: Right ...

Let's Practice!

Do you remember how to take notes? What were the important details that Peter received* from Bill in the training workshop?

Learning Points

Note-Taking

Note-taking is an important skill.

When you take notes, you write down words, dates and numbers that are the most important parts of a conversation or piece of writing.

Notes do not have all the information, they have the most important information.

Notes include:

1. A title and date
2. What's new to you? Do not write down facts you already know.
3. What's relevant? What information are you going to use later?
4. Dates of events
5. Names of people

Often, you use bullet points and arrows to organize the information. Arrows show how things are connected. This can be done, for example, when you use the simple present tense in affirmative form.

This can also be done, for example, when using verbs with infinitives.

Examples:

- The work day starts at 8:00 a.m. and finishes at 4:00.
- I need to write this down.
